Savings Bond Drive Open October 14th

It has been announced by the Hon. Douglas Abbott, minister of finance that a second series of Canada Savings Bonds will be placed on sale on October 14th. Mr. Abbott pointed out that this will enable the continuance of the Payroll Savings Plan now in operation in thousands of organizations throughout the country and will also permit its installation by other companies who recognize its value. The new Canada Savings Bonds will also be available for purchase by the general public, who have found them to be a convenient and profitable investment for personal savings. They will be available for cash or on instalments.

The minister of finance described the features of the second series of Canada Savings Bonds, which will be dated November 1, 1947, and will bear interest at the rate of 2 3/4 percent each year for ten years. They may be redeemed at any time at any bank in Canada for full face value plus interest and will be registered in the owners name, affording protection loss. Not more than $1,000 of this series may be registered in any one name.

SURPRISE PARTY

A surprise birthday party for Mr. E. J. Ohlhauser was held at his home Sunday noon, Sept. 28th, when 38 relatives and friends were present including Mr. Ohlhauser's father and two sisters from Calgary.

After a very successful surprise Miss Lilly Bertsch and Mrs. Leo Ohlhauser kept the guests in high interest with several quiz's. A duct was sung by Lilly Bertsch and Mrs. Art Buye and a poem, "Not Growing Old" was also given by Mrs. Buyer. Everyone then joined in a hearty sing-song.

Mr. Ohlhauser expressed his thanks and appreciation and said this was an event he would never forget.

A most delicious supper lunch was served by Mrs. E. J. Ohlhauser and Mrs. D. Wilson.

Mr. Abbott said that the offering of this second series has been prompted by the reception given to Canada Savings Bonds since their introduction last October. Purchases have been made by more than 1,200,000 Canadians. This total includes 623,840 employees who used Payroll Savings Plan facilities provided by their employers.

Although the decision to offer a second series is based primarily on demonstrated public demand for these facilities, it was explained by Mr. Abbott that the government also has in mind the value of widespread holdings of Canada Savings Bonds in the national economy. Present holdings have already rendered more than a million Canadians better able to meet personal emergencies or to carry out personal plans. Such personal resources are regarded as an element of strength and stability in the nation.

Every appropriate means of informing the public of the details of the new series will be used. Mr. Abbott stated it is confidently expected that Canadians will again recognize this fine investment opportunity and will make plans to take full advantage of it.

Farm Mechanization

MACHINERY HAS PLAYED AN increasingly important part in industry since it was first discovered that by using machines man's work could be considerably lightened, and the time required for accomplishing many tasks could be reduced. Machinery is essential to modern agriculture as it is to all industry, and constant work has been done in improving farm machinery and in inventing new types of machines which will increase the efficiency of farm work and cut down on the amount of manual labor which the farmer must do. In Canada, as well as in Britain, acute labor shortages in recent years have increased the interest of farmers in mechanizing their farms.

Farm Owners Have Problem

In this connection, however, owners of small farms, of which there are many, are faced with the problem of having to buy a number of high priced machines, each with a specific function, with the result that much valuable equipment may lie idle for a good part of the year. The need for farm machines with multiple uses has long been of interest to many farmers, and this subject was discussed by agricultural experts when a demonstration of the latest types of farm machinery was held recently at Macdonald College, in the province of Quebec. There it was agreed that if Canadian food production is to be kept at a high level, wider use of machinery will be necessary to offset shortages of labor.

Interest In New Machines

Agricultural engineers at this gathering viewed new types of machines designed to do diversified farm work and to meet the needs of the small farms. No comment was given out on the working of these machines, but it is possible that more extensive means of mechanizing his farm may soon be at the disposal of the average farmer who cannot afford a large outlay of money for equipment which will not be in constant use. Increased mechanization in any industry has always resulted in progress, and it is to be hoped that Canadian farmers may benefit considerably in the near future by more and more efficient tools with which to carry on their important work.

FUNNY And OTHERWISE

And how do you find married life, Jock?" Sandy asked him on return from his honeymoon.

"Och, marriage is a wonderful thing an' all," was the reply. "I'm wearing a pair of shoes someone tied to my wedding car."

"I see you have been fishing. Catch anything?"

"Yes, two."

"Good, what were they?"

"The 7.30 there, and the 5.13 back."

A man named Joe Hogbristle appeared in court to have his name legally changed. The judge nodded understandingly, and asked, "what name do you want to take?" "Frank Hogbristle. I'm sick and tired of hearing people say, 'Hi, Joe, whaddya know?'"

"I don't believe you know the meaning of the word 'courtship,'" said the designing young woman.

"Don't I?" replied the wary young man. "Courtship means running after a woman till she catches you!"

"I can't understand how you manage to keep so calm whatever happens," said Robinson.

"Oh, it's just a matter of training," explained Thompson. "You see, I've a wife, five children, two dogs, and a cigarette lighter!"

"I haven't seen you at church lately, William," said the vicar. "What's the matter?"

"My daughter's learning to play the harp," replied William. "But what's that got to do with it?"

"Well, I'm not so keen on going to Heaven as I was!"

"All this talk about feminism is utter rot. There isn't a woman alive who wouldn't rather be beautiful than clever."

"Quite true," agreed the woman. "But the reason for that, you see, is because so many men are stupid and so few are blind."

Allied Nations Lack Incentive Says Alexander

NEW YORK—Viscount Alexander, Canada's governor-general, declared that the "great incentive of a single purpose" which gave the Allies their victory in war is lacking now in their march to the peace.

But, he said in an address prepared for delivery before the American Legion convention here, "I do not think we should be unduly alarmed or discouraged at this."

"For after all, history teaches us that on the conclusion of all great wars there are serious differences of opinion on all matters connected with peace and its many intricate problems."

"And, if others disagree with us, and if we cannot persuade them to our way of thought, then the next best thing we can do is to settle our affairs with those whose views coincide with our own."

Since he had been in Canada, said Viscount Alexander, he had been "greatly impressed" by the good neighborly relations which existed between the Dominion and its southern neighbor, but he did not think it right to say the two peoples were practically alike.

In fact, it was "much more important" that they be different because the strength in their relationship lay in the fact they should be complementary to each other and that each gave the other something new.

Better Living on the Prairie Farm

Agriculture's great need today is for better farm homes—better living. A modern home in a well-planned farmstead is still only a dream on many of our prairie farms. In the pioneer days home conveniences were given scant consideration. Today, however, farm people are anxious to have modern homes with the most up-to-date equipment and conveniences.

Recent surveys have indicated that over fifty per cent of our farm homes need repairs and over twenty-five per cent need replacement. Every home uses water and yet less than ten per cent have an inside supply. To meet the average family's need someone has to carry about 50 tons of water into the home each year and will travel about 100 miles in getting it there. As a result of this drudgery, housewives give a water system in the home a high priority.

More than ever before, farm families are asking for information today on home design, room planning, and labor-saving equipment. This accelerated demand for information cannot be met from pamphlets and installations suitable for city homes.

Recently a Prairie Rural Planning Committee was established to consider and recommend research into the problems peculiar to rural housing. The financial support for this program, coming from the prairie governments and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Ottawa, will be a good investment if it leads to better homes and an easier life for those who live in rural areas.

The housing problem is a real challenge to the young people who are taking over our farms. Obviously they can create a major improvement in the rural standard of living by repairing the farm home and installing modern lighting, plumbing, and plumbing facilities.

WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange

The Question of Rye

Some people seem to be quite agitated about the high price of rye. For those who are considering this matter here are a few recent pieces of evidence.

One of Canada's ablest private crop reporters states that on a recent trip over the West he saw in the drought area many fields of wheat with yields so low that the farmers were not harvesting them. The fields were abandoned but in the same district fields of rye, with similar low yields were being most carefully harvested and the grain saved and shipped to market. This because the higher price for rye paid to do the harvesting. So grain for human consumption was saved.

The Saskatoon Star Phoenix of September 2nd tells us that a single carload of rye was purchased from farmers at Blaine Lake for the sum of $7,160.00 or $3.33½ a bushel. It is calculated that it would take three carloads of wheat at present prices to fetch the same amount of money as did this one carload of rye.

A farmer who has done well on rye said this in a recent letter: "While wheat may be the staff of life, rye surely is the gold headed cane."

NEW RECOILLESS ARTILLERY FOR U.S. ARMY—U.S. army ordnance personnel at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., demonstrates the 105 mm. recoilless rifle, the latest addition to the army's collection of recoilless weapons. A portion of the fast-expanding gases which drive the projectile to its mark is ejected through vents near the breech, neutralizing the "kick". The non-recoil feature actually causes the gun to jump forward upon firing.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

The Compensation :

—By—
LYTLE W. ROBINSON

JOHN MCGRAW was a failure. He knew it. He had gone through life and accomplished nothing, really. Retiring now at 65, he realized he'd not made a mark in the world—not one solitary attainment to which he could point with pride. Nothing.

He was not at all happy as he started on the last lap of his route. "His route". Well, it had been his route for six weeks now, but after today it would belong to another—a younger, fresher man. The thought made him feel a good deal older than he actually was, and for a man who had just gained his independence this was no way to feel.

John was a simple man, and he lived a simple life. Some people would call it dull, and he guessed he agreed with them. Everybody can't do what they'd like to do. For 33 years he had carried the mail in Bluff City, and in that time he'd had almost every route in town. Winter and summer, through rain and snow and sweltering heat, he'd trudged along with his heavy bag, always with a kind word for the housewives, a smile for the children; for John McGraw, the postman, loved his fellow man. And he loved Bluff City too. He was born and raised here, and, when the time came he wanted to die and be buried here too. In all these years John McGraw had stood still!

A few more blocks now and he would be through. He pushed the thought out of his mind.

Forty years ago as a struggling young painter he had dreamed of great things; of accomplishing something worth while in life. But those things had never come to pass, and as he grew older the world knocked out the dreams and ambitions of which he had once been so proud. Yes, John McGraw had failed.

At 25 he had married Sara, and Sara wanted security at any price. She was one of those wives who say little and mean much. But she was a good woman—so good she made everybody else feel uncomfortable. It wasn't often she lost her temper. On the contrary, she seemed to always have it with her.

He had never forgotten that day in his den many years ago. A splotch of red paint had been daubed on an unfinished canvas, and his favorite brush was missing.

"Yes, I did it," Sara said coldly. "I'm sick of the smell of paint. It stifles me! Don't you ever want to do anything but paint?"

And it had caught him off-balance. He never suspected! He was a selling painter! "Why—no, I don't," he managed to utter.

"I thought not," Sara continued. "Other men work for a living and get some place. And you—you're satisfied with a few measly checks and a two-room apartment!" And she'd turned and walked out of the room.

John stood there and looked at the red splotch on the portrait. He looked at it a long time before he covered it up and put away his materials. He got a job after that and never painted again.

Now he could not paint if he tried. The name of John McGraw would forever mean nothing, for John McGraw had contributed nothing—not even children. And what did he have to show for his years of toil as a public servant? A little white house, an aching back—and Sara!

He shuffled the envelopes in his hand. Tomorrow he would retire on the Government pension he had looked forward to since that first day as a sub. The pension seemed a small thing now. Security? Yes. But it seemed a foolish thing to have worked a lifetime for a pittance only to retire into uselessness on a dole.

Dreamily, he walked down the tree-lined streets he knew so well. He would miss the cheery "Good Mornings" and the bright smiles of the people who waited for him. He liked to see their faces light up when he handed them the letters they expected; he hated to see the sag around their mouths when he had to say, "No, nothing today!"

Good news and bad he brought to 'his' families these 33 years. He knew their joys and sadnesses; their successes and failures. He had seen the children grow up and go into the world to make their fortunes; and he had hoped for their success and happiness. And John McGraw was still delivering the mail!

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Johnson," he said trying to force a smile as he handed her two letters.

Now take the Johnson's, for instance; Dan Johnson was a success. He had his own business; owned a fine home. He had something to be proud of.

John crossed the street to the Morris. A big family they were, three boys and three girls. Mrs. Morrow was a splendid woman. Once during a rainstorm she'd insisted on getting him a hot cup of coffee. He hadn't forgotten that, even if it had been five years ago.

As usual, little Theresa raced out to meet him. "Hi," she said smiling timidly up at him.

He handed her four letters and patted her tow head. "How's my little girl?"

"Fine—and thanks," she beamed, then dashed excitedly back into the house calling to her mother.

The Cohens, Simpsons, Balkovics, Smiths and O'Reillys—John knew them all by their first names. He wondered if they knew he existed—except as a machine.

John's shoulders seemed a little more stooped as he walked back to the office for the last time. It was hard giving up the route, but it was harder still realizing he'd never had more than just a route.

He didn't know what to think when he got back to the locker room and found a long envelope tucked under his civilian hat. Slowly he opened it and read the letter inside. He read the last paragraphs three times.

"May we extend our sincere congratulations upon your retirement. Your presence as Guest of Honor at the dinner is desired in order that we may express our appreciation for your years of kind and faithful service to this community."

"And John, come prepared to say a few words—they're giving you a watch."

Your friend,
Dan Johnson, President,
The Homeowners Association."

Old John carefully folded the letter and replaced it in the envelope. Then he straightened his shoulders and looked up at the ceiling. "Guest of Honor"—Years of kind and faithful service! Suddenly his heart filled with pride, and there were tears in his eyes.

In spite of the red splotch, John McGraw had made his mark!

FARMER'S COLUMN

Do you have pigs on your farm? If so you will be interested in some of the newer swine diseases. What do you know about Bull Nose or Rhinitis? First of all these are not the same disease as is commonly thought. Dr. R. C. Duthie of the Veterinary Research Laboratory, Lethbridge, explains the differences clearly and we farmers must learn how to distinguish one from the other and how to avoid either disease getting a foothold in our herd.

Bull Nose is caused by infection gaining entrance thru broken teeth. When clipping the wolf teeth of suckling pigs do not cut too deeply, just the tip. If cut too deeply the lower part of the tooth is often injured or the gums torn, thus leaving an opening for infection. Often, as a result, abscesses form at the base of the tooth and severe swellings occur which puff out the skin of the jaw or snout, giving that peculiar bull-dog appearance which has been termed Bull Nose. Dr. Duthie says that "more harm is done by cutting these teeth than the little pig is capable of doing to either the sow or his litter mates." Nevertheless, it is imperative that the tips of the wolf teeth or side teeth be clipped but only as deeply as the black tip or solid part of the teeth.

Bull Nose and Rhinitis are two different and distinct diseases and little pigs can have one or the other or both.

Rhinitis is an inflammation of the membranes of the nasal cavities and is usually associated with later degeneration and destruction of the turbinate bones. Bull Nose is the result of abscesses at the roots of the teeth.

With Rhinitis a cough that becomes chronic will appear. As the germ breaks down the channels of the nasal cavity a bloody discharge will appear. By using hay or shavings for bedding to relieve dusty conditions which irritates the infected parts of the nose. Again, slop feeding is recommended to alleviate dust in the dry chop. Also use sifted feeds to remove hulls of oats and barley.

Rhinitis is contagious and can be spread from one suckling pig to another. As the disease develops the upper portion of the face does not grow naturally whereas the lower jaw growing more normally, extends out further than the upper jaw giving that bull dog appearance.

It is because of these symptoms that the two diseases are often confusing.

OFF THE RECORD

It is suggested that the world is changing rapidly in this atomic age so that conditions of people will level out quickly. That seems good provided that the atomic age doesn't make us all dead level!
